Two recreation positions cut to reduce budget deficit

by Lindy Magner

Last Monday night, City Council adopted amendments to its current budget which will cut several positions in an effort to reduce costs now and in the future because of actual and anticipated losses in revenue.

Two recreation specialists in the recreation department as well as a landscape maintenance position were eliminated with the budget amendment. And although the layoffs won't save the city much in this fiscal year, the council is expecting a continuing battle to find enough revenue to cover expenses without deeper cuts.

Before council adopted the amendment, it heard public comments on the budget issue in which the three recreation specialists pleaded that the council reconsider.

"I wish you would look at other options other than layoffs. With less specialists, the programming in the Rec Department will be hurt in the long run," stated David Huey, a 10-year employee with the department.

According to City Manager Jack Shelver, without cuts in current expenditures and taking monies from its reserve fund, the city could not have a balanced budget at year-end.

He stated that when the fiscal 91-92 budget was adopted last July, a $9,000 surplus was expected rather than a deficit and cuts began in early fall as the outlook worsened.

"In July, the indications from economists were that we would come out of the recession in the fall. We didn't know that the economy would be stagnant or that Lee White (Toyota) would go out of business."

The budget problems are caused in part by a drop in sales tax revenues from an expected $1.9 million to an optimistic prediction of $1.6 million, said Shelver, who noted that revenues from vehicle license fees were also down this year.

In addition to the decrease in revenues, the city has been unexpectedly hit with $140,000 in expenditures mandated by the state, including booking fees it must pay to the county as well as expenditures on street repairs it must budget in accordance with Proposition 111.

For the past several months, city staff has been "agonizing" over what reductions they would suggest. A hiring freeze went into effect last fall, and employees who voluntarily left, such as a firefighter, were not replaced.

The number of budgeted city employees is now 54, down from the 60 employed in the previous fiscal year.

The amended budget also includes a $90,000 reduction in the fire department's budget accomplished through reductions in overtime and some training expenses, reported Shelver.

Also at the meeting, a public hearing was held on the owner/participation plan required by state law before the redevelopment agency can proceed with its intentions to put a Home Depot on Broadway.

Shelver reported that no current property owner in the project area had come forward stating that they wished to develop the project themselves: a scenario which, in this case of redevelopment, no one expected.

Several residents from the Elmwood Mobile Home Park wished to speak in general about the Broadway Commercial Project which would cause the relocation of residents.

They were informed that a public hearing will be held once the environmental studies on the project are completed.

Before the business of the meeting, two proclamations were presented by the mayor. Capt. Lynne Ziegler, former commander of the Lemon Grove Sheriff's Station, was recognized for her community service. Ziegler was transferred to the central jail, effective last Friday.

Also, Chief Bill Wright of the Lemon Grove Fire Department was given a proclamation for his earthquake preventiveness program in local schools.

Readers who may have seen Jan Davis standing in front of the city's landmark with a sold sign needn't fear, as she hasn't really sold the city's lemon. Jan has had an award-winning year with Coldwell Banker and decided the lemon would identify her as a specialist in this area. Jan is a longtime resident and is active in many local organizations. She is publicity director for the Old Time Days Association and would like to remind everyone to reserve May 8 and 9 on their calendars for Old Time Days.

Moore running for City Council

Jack Moore, a Lemon Grove resident for 15 years, is one of eight candidates who filed for two council seats up for grabs in June.

The 53-year-old property manager graduated from San Diego State University in 1965, and served four years in the U.S. Coast Guard.

He is a member of the Community Association Institute, the Lemon Grove Chamber of Commerce, the San Diego Apartment Association, the Sierra Club, and has served as a volunteer in the Lemon Grove Sheriff's Station.

He states that if elected, his agenda would include "revealing and accountable budgeting, restoring the independence of the city clerk/financial officer, improving residential infrastructure, and funding depleted capital reserves."

"Over the past 10 years, our city budget grew 150 percent while our population increased 15 percent. Civilian employment more than doubled. We're broke, and property values are among the lowest in the county," he said.

"I'm concerned about budgetary priorities," Moore added. "My hope is to emphasize the quality of life in our community and to allocate revenues to achieve that end."

Friends of Dianne Jacob organize

An enthusiastic group of business people, community leaders, local officials and concerned citizens has formed the Lemon Grove Friends of Dianne Jacob.

The group held its first meeting Wednesday, March 11, at the home of Lemon Grove Mayor Jim Dorman and his wife, Carol.

Some of the city's best-known activists are now pledged to work for Jacob's candidacy for Second District County Supervisor, said co-chair Carol Dorman.

In her capacity as the mayor's wife and as a corporate community affairs manager responsible for East County, Mrs. Dorman said she has had many opportunities to interact with Jacob and see her leadership in action.

"I have been very concerned about the future of East county, about its growth and its quality of life. Dianne has been very responsive to these concerns. I am impressed by her intelligence, articulation, and grasp of issues. She has sound knowledge of the deficiencies in county government and viable plans to correct them. She's an extraordinary person."

Co-chair H. Warren Buckner agreed. "Dianne is well-informed, an excellent listener and she has lots of energy. She has good ideas and articulates them well. We need a new, effective supervisor for our district and from what I have seen, Dianne will be the best person for the job.

Lemon Grove supporters of Dianne Jacob include: Warren Buckner, Carline Zarling, Carol Chubb and Carol Dorman, co-chairs; David Allen, Al and Millie Crooks, Ilse and Walter Hanning, Charles L. Hart, Trenton W. Huls, Richard Hundley, Craig O. Lake, Dorothy Masters-Yorba, Winifred Monroe, Alfred and Exia Pinkham, Julie A. Sevier and Lewis Zollinger.

Fitness comes to school district

Lemon Grove School District was recently selected to participate in the launch of "Campaign 2000," a nationwide fitness program which will provide comprehensive cardiovascular fitness programming and education throughout America over the next five years.

The National Fitness Campaign, an organization which develops and disseminates educational and motivational fitness programs for people of all ages, has selected nearly 200 of the nation's leading hospitals as "Campaign 2000" Regional Associates to spearhead this initiative and develop educational partnerships in communities across the nation. Alvarado Hospital has been established as the Regional Associate whose assigned area includes Lemon Grove School District.

As an integrated series of resources which have been developed in order to lead thousands of people into more active lifestyles, "Campaign 2000" provides fitness facilities, and promotional and educational materials which are being distributed to each of the communities, school districts, and civic organizations which have been selected to participate.

Lemon Grove School District will be opening an outdoor fitness program component known as the Gamefield Games Court. This state-of-the-art outdoor fitness facility is the symbol of "Campaign 2000" and the goals it seeks to achieve over the next five years. Selected local Games Courts will become the site for a series of local, regional, and national events and challenges.

An Opening Day Event is to be held at Lemon Grove School District to celebrate the launch of this five-year effort, which will be undertaken as a community partnership in order to bring the gifts of fitness and health to the people of our area.

From the Grossmont Union High School District Board Room

by June M. Mott

Dealing with 53 items on a crowded agenda, bestowing special recognition, and listening to speakers on the voucher system occupied the Governing Board at the March 12 meeting.

CIF award-winning teams in water polo and wresting from Valhalla and Monte Vista High School were recognized for their contributions, and Dr. Michael Eddy, administrative director of services for the district, was honored as the recipient of an Award of Merit from the San Diego High School Sports Association.

Assistant superintendent of finances, Fred Martinez, submitted the second report on the district's financial status (as required by AB2861).

A five-year (rather than a three-year) plan for deferred maintenance was submitted for Board approval before going to the state. All such plans have been on hold because of the state's finances.

The Parental Choice/Scholarship Initiative generated some heat before the Board voted on a resolution opposing it.

Beverly and William Clark of Alpine spoke against the resolution and in favor of the initiative, pointing out that they felt members of the Board should read the entire initiative first. When she polled the Board, she seemed surprised to learn that a majority (plus student rep Josh Cohen) had done so already.

She said that the initiative would save taxpayers $1 billion a year (actual cost analysis reveals a cost of $1.5 billion the first year and increasing costs after that) and would also reduce class size. She predicted that public schools would add 200,000 students in the next 10 years. She emphasized, "You people should take a vote on what's best for children; vote on competition; it's the American way. Table this resolution; don't take a stand!"

Governing Board member Tony Orosco said he opposed the initiative because it was too great a gamble. He stressed that people (and the board) should work within the system (public education) and improve it.

Member Tom Davies said he had given a great deal of thought to his position and, because of many ambivalent feelings, he refused to take a stand on the resolution.

Board member Maynard Olsen believes that it was possible to favor both the Parental-Choice Initiative and public education. He felt many people wanted the option of choice in educating their children. Superintendent Jo Ann Smith reminded everyone that the District already offers many options for choice to students and parents when space/courses are available.

Student rep John Cohen revealed that his parents had enrolled him in a private school at $6,000 a year for several years and that, in his opinion, the education he was getting at Grossmont High School equalled, if not surpassed in some respects, the private schooling he had had.

Former Valhalla High School grad, Michael Saltzstein, urged the Board to ignore outside pressures and make the right decision.

Personally, I have no quarrel with parents who want to enroll their children in a private or parochial school; that's their right. However, I do have real problems with using public tax dollars to support anything but public schools! Taxpayers should think carefully about what this initiative would do to the principles on which our democracy is founded.

The giving of $2,500 to parents for each child is no guarantee that the sum would be sufficient to even get a child admitted to a private school. (Anyone with a license and 25 kids can open a school. Does that provide excellence?)

In addition, such schools are not obligated to take handicapped children, learning disabled/mentally disturbed children or those with other needs as the public schools must do. Nor would they be required to keep them - as the public schools are. In effect, Californians would be creating elitism, which is in direct opposition to equality for all.

Neither are such schools required to hire certificated teachers, offer state-approved or accredited courses, and are not required to abide by the same safety codes that the public schools must.

While such schools may be able to address morality issues, public schools cannot. In my opinion, morals should be taught by the parents and the church. The failure of society to do so has resulted in "dumping" this on the public schools which were never meant to deal with such issues.

Remember: public schools are meant to deal with subject matter knowledge - not with the care and feeding of students, the provision of health clinics, the supplying of bus transportation, or before-and-after school care for "latch key" kids. Bluntly, the public schools have had all of these and more shoved on them by a society that refuses to recognize that the public schools mirror society. So, if tempted to criticize public education, think about that. Also, people should not use the term "compete" for public schools. We all know what the obsession with materialism has cost us. We in public education deal with minds - not products!

According to Kay McGrath, president of the Grossmont Education Association, there are some real legal "headaches" in this initative that restrict any future changes to the governance and/or regulations of private schools. It requires any changes to be approved by either a three-fourths vote of the legislature of two-thirds vote of a local governmental board, in addition to a majority vote of "qualified electors." Gobbledygook?!?

Finally, what this would mean to salaries, working conditions, benefits of employment and pensions poses real questions.

The vote on the resolution to oppose the initiative follows: Voting yes: Ken Whitcomb, Tony Orosco, June Matt, and Josh Cohen; voting no: Maynard Olsen; abstaining: Thomas Davies.

Green Slime

The "Rumor Capital" of Lemon Grove is the Tonsorial Parlor, or the barber shop as it also known. The latest game to come from the offices of Bill and Sylvia is a new product called DYE Witness. In the spirit of information, not advertising, the item is called a "Criminal Identifier." This is a small, hand-held dispenser of something called "Green Slime," and it shoots a seven-foot stream under 70 pounds of pressure.

Firearms and even teargas dispensers require licenses and training to legally carry. Apparently this does not. Instead of illegally carrying a gun that may accidentally do unnecessary and lethal harm, or a product like mace that can be turned back on the user, this can only cause a mess. A blast of foaming green dye is delivered into the face of an attacker for best effect. So administered, it foams all over the criminal's face within seconds, and will obscure vision without harming the eyes.

When the full blast has been delivered, the foam will completely cover the face and look like one of the horror movies villains, only with a St. Patrick's Day flavor. The sticky green goo will leave a trail as the assailant tries to escape and will remain on the person for seven days so that identification is sustained. Usually, victims are so taken by surprise that their recollection is faulty and true descriptions are rare. Wearing this green stain, a person is unquestionably either a New York Jet football player, or a crook. Also, there is a period of disorientation after being sprayed green, so that a victim can't escape or even fight back.

The palm-sized dispenser can only be used once, and is easily carried in a purse. To operate, a pin is pulled, much like a grenade, and then the trigger is pressed while aiming it at an attacker. Being marked with a week's worth of green slime, it would certainly be much easier for the police to find a criminal even if the rest of the description was unclear. It has been used extensively in stages attacks, but the experience in actual field conditions is scarce. However, the company and policy advisors are both confident of its usefulness in crime prevention.

Bill Ware, at the Tonsorial Parlor, has brochures and more particulars for anyone who might be interested. This newspaper and I disclaim any responsibility for the use of the product, and its mention here is purely for its news value. I had thought that it might be a device developed at Michigan State to spray opposing linemen with their school color on the gridiron, but since they only won three games last season, I guess that is not the case.

Seriously, our trips to the shopping mall, or just about any other neighborhoods, is becoming increasingly dangerous these days. Being accosted is a daily occurrence, and there are about as many angry confrontations as there are polite requests, so it may well be that something like this could serve a real purpose. I would want to be sure of the legality of the item, so it is best to check with local police agency before buying one.

From Where I Sit

The Luce Line

by Frank Andrews

From grade six until graduating from high school in 1940, I lived with my father with the only an occasional short visit from my mother. Our new house, the one that replaced our old burned down summer cottage, was built on a lot-sized piece of land but only about one city block from Stubbs Bay, a small bay in the famous Lake Minnetonka chain. It sure was a nifty place to live and to be raised-up as I was always either by the water, on the water, or in the water.

Our house was directly adjacent to the Luce Line railroad tracks. The short line was named after Colonel Luce, a pioneer railroad builder of the time. The diesel engine pulled only one or two coaches, depending on the number of passengers and it ran straight west out of Minneapolis to Watertown, South Dakota, stopping to pick up fares at every tiny community along its total distance of about 400 miles.

The Luce Line Company owned a huge recreation area right on the lakeshore near us. It included a huge pavilion, dance hall, picnic areas, boat rentals and much, much more. Big ethnic groups and company-sponsored picnics were held there nearly every Sunday during summer weather. We locals would sneak into the festivities and get free food. We would also enter in all their games and races, usually winning some of their prizes. The passenger train would bring most of the guests out there and then wait for their return to Minneapolis. It would turn around at a special Y-shaped siding track that was directly across from our house.

Once in a great while a full freight train would go by, usually in the middle of the quiet night. Being so close to the tracks we were nearly shaken out of bed every time. We were located between two small gravel crossroads, so for the sake of safety all trains would blast their diesel whistles loud and clear to finish waking up the rest of the area. The passenger train ran only once a day; leaving Watertown early to arrive at Stubbs Bay close to 9:00 a.m. and returning about 6:30 p.m., but rarely on time.

Nearly daily, a big black Buick equipped with train wheels would inspect the tracks going full throttle. I always wondered how much of anything was inspected because the four guys were always facing each other - probably playing cards - as the vehicles did not require steering but they did manage to blow that awful whistle at every crossing. After the tracks were checked, the section gang would take off on their hand car, propelled by two men pumping a kind of teeter totter power plant in the center of the cute, little rig.

I grew up to know that track heading west very well as that was my path to grade school every weekday come "snow or high water." It was a distance of about two miles, all up hill both ways. Later, when we moved back to the Stubbs Bay area after the war, my oldest daughter went to the same Bederwood #91 two-room school as I did not too many years prior.

Of course I teased her about how rough I had it: walking that harsh two miles in winter, she had a bus meet her at the door; we had outside plumbing, she had the latest inside facilities; hot lunches versus my brim filled lard pail that I swung at my side walking those tracks.

At the time we moved back, my work was located in downtown Minneapolis, a distance of about 30 miles. Some winter mornings when my old car couldn't start, I walked to the train station (a small lean-to shack) down the tracks just west of our house. Even if the fare was an exorbent $1 round trip it was my only chance to get to work for my $18 per week salary.

I guess we were happier in those old times because the world moved a little slower and without all the present day "stress."

Commissioner French was nominated for the position of Chairman and Commissioner Gordon was chosen as Vice-Chairman.

After a brief break for refreshments, the Commission resumed and discussed the role and function of their group. They made plans for organizing the Commission by breaking down into sub-committees.

There was also talk of hosting an annual event at the La Mesa Senior Adult Center that would introduce the public to the La Mesa Commission on Aging. This event is tentatively scheduled for July 4, with food, musical entertainment and loads of fun.

After formalities were taken care of, an informal discussion of important matters that pertain to La Mesa seniors took place. Lack of transportation, bereavement counseling, senior funds, low-income senior housing, public improvements and Dial-A-Ride were among the topics discussed. There were plenty of seats available to the public for this first meeting of the Commission on Aging. But if word gets out about this dynamic group changing the tide for La Mesa seniors, it might be standing-room-only next time, so come early.

If you would like to attend the next meeting of the La Mesa Commission on Aging, circle March 27 on your calendar and head for the La Mesa Senior Adult Center, 8450 La Mesa Blvd., at 2:30 p.m.

Ware honored by barbers' union for 37 years membership

by Jim McVicar

Next time you're in Lemon Grove, stop by and get an old-fashioned haircut from Bill Ware, a 37-year union member. Or just stop by to say hello - Bill would enjoy the company.

Bill, who has been cutting hair in and around Lemon Grove since about 1954, is located conveniently on Main Street directly west of the trolley depot. His two-chair shop, called the "Tonsorial Parlor," is in its own tiny building, the last survivor of what once was a whole row of shops.

"Tonsorial" is an old-fashioned word for barber. It's derived from the word "tonsure," which literally means "to shave the head."

Bill will shave your head, if you insist, but he also has the artistic ability and experience to "style" your hair - as the upscale folks say.

He also reminds you that, in the old days, barbers not only cut your hair, but also performed dentistry, set bones and did other such complex tasks.

"I believe their patient mortality rate was very high, considering their total lack of formal medical or dental training," Bill commented. "Me? I've pretty much stuck to just cutting hair."

Bill, a native San Diego who grew up in the Hillcrest district and went to San Diego High School, says he kind of backed into the barbering profession because he hated the job he had.

I was delivering heavy appliances for Walker-Scott (a big local department store no longer in business) and didn't see that as my lifetime career.

"One day I was getting a haircut in North Park and the barber tells me that he's looking for help. He said I should go to barber school and he'd hire me. I followed his advice, but he went back on his promise and wouldn't hire me, so I came out here to Lemon Grove and I've been here ever since."

A photograph on the shop wall shows the intersection of Broadway and Lemon Grove Avenue as it was in the '50s. Lemon Grove then was a small village with more citrus trees than people.

Bill, 63, worked for other barbers at several shops for a while, then got his own spot. He's been at his present location for 15 years.

"Some of my customers go all the way back to the start," he said. "In terms of years-of-service, I may not be the oldest barber in the county, but I'm right up there.

Bill joined the Barbers Union right away and has remained a union member all these years. The Barbers merged with the UFWC several years ago.

UFWC Local 135's Vince Salazar presented Bill with his 35-year pin during a recent visit to the shop. "Sorry, we don't have 37-year pins, but stick around and we'll give you one for 40!"

Friends of the Lemon Grove Library Newsletter

1992 ELECTION IS RE-ELECTION

By a unanimous vote at the January Friends of the Library meeting, officers were re-elected for 1992. Officers will continue to be: President, Tracy Brooks; Vice President, Ron Day; Secretary, Dorothy Geldreich and Treasurer, Laura Barrett.

FRIENDS OF THE LIBRARY

The following article by Christine Kerbstat is from the January issue of the Friends of the Julian Library newsletter and is reprinted with her permission. It reflects very well the service the Friends provide to their libraries.

"Friends - As happens the world over, friends are sometimes taken for granted. I know it happens with the Friends of this library. From where I stand, I get to hear a lot of thoughtless complaints about what the library doesn't have - usually from people who never think about where lots of what we do have comes from!

"Friends make a lot of things possible around here - things that are now often taken for granted - so I'd like to remind all of us about what we an be thankful for:

- more best-sellers than a small library would normally have.
- more magazine subscriptions, music and good tapes, language tapes, gardening books, cookbooks, art books, craft books and children's books than were planned for at this branch.
- a top-notch basic video collection.
- Monday evening hours, available because a Friend volunteers to be the second staff necessary.
- shelving assistance because the library can't afford to hire a page.
- untold hours of effort put into book sales and other fund-raising functions.
- funding of posters and bookmarks and seasonal displays such as our Christmas tree.
- cheerleading duties when the branch manager is tired or discouraged.
- this newsletter you are reading.
- bowing to space limitations, I'll stop here, but I'd like to end with a heartfelt, "Well done, dear Friend, each and every one of you!"

LONELY BOOKS ASK FOR TOUCH OF HUMAN HANDS - SEND THEM TO THE BOOK SALE

Book sale time approaches with the May 8-9 Old Time Days celebration in Lemon Grove. The book sale is the largest annual fund raiser for the Friends of the Lemon Grove Library and its success is dependent on the generosity of those who contribute their used books for resale.

After you've read that good book, loaned it to your neighbor, your kids, the hairdresser, don't put it onto the bookshelf to gather dust. Books like to be read; they like the touch of human hands. Make your books happy and donate them to the book sale to be read again and again.

Books should be bagged or boxed, tagged "For Friends of the Library," and dropped off at the Lemon Grove Library, 8073 Broadway, Lemon Grove. Because of space limitations, Carol Stanley, branch librarian, asks that book donations come in after April 9.

Paperbacks are popular, hardbound too, fiction and non-fiction. Cookbooks, travel, biographies, how-to, history, children's books - every subject has someone asking for it.

STORY TIMES, MARCH and APRIL

March 26
April 2
April 16
April 30

Story time for 3- to 5-year-olds will be at 10:30 a.m. on the above dates.

WELCOME TO NEWEST MEMBER OF THE ROSETE FAMILY

Paula and "Sonny" Rosete became the parents of Nicholas Alexander "Nico" Rosete upon his birth January 23. He joins an older brother, Rudy. Paula Rosete has been a library technician at our branch since 1989. She will be returning to her library duties very soon.

DEATH AND TAXES ARE STILL CERTAIN

Only death and taxes are certain, according to an old saying, but tax assistance service has been removed from the library this year. Previously, volunteers used the community room at the library and provided assistance to those who needed help in preparation of tax forms. Although library staff members were not a part of tax assistance, the many questions and peripheral work involved used many hours of staff time. Federal and state tax forms are no longer stocked at the library. Bookmarks printed with information as to where to find forms, tax information, and tax assistance are available at the library.

DARK TIMES

Open hours at the library may be cut at times in the near future when there are not sufficient personnel available to keep it open to the public. A notice has been posted at the entrance to the library to announce that, due to staff shortage, there may be times when the doors do not open.

CATHERINE LUCAS, COUNTY LIBRARIAN, TO RETIRE IN MARCH

Catherine Lucas has held the post of county librarian for more than 10 years. The 32 branch library and two bookmobiles have been a part of her responsibility. She has been a strong leader and a friend to all the libraries and communities whose needs she has served.

At the February meeting, the Friends of the Lemon Grove Library voted to award a Life Membership to Catherine Lucas, who has been a member of our group for several years.

WELCOME TO NEW MEMBER

We welcome Jane White of Lemon Grove as a new member.

Forms are available at the library and we urge every library patron to support our group and the library with their membership.

THANK YOU FOR YOUR HELP

- Thank you to the Harold Kubie family who donated several reference books to the library in memory of their father.
- Thank you to Pete Kaufman, publisher of the Lemon Grove Review, whose newspaper prints and delivers this newsletter to our doors.
